Reddit Pain Points Summary

Here are the top 5 recurring pain points or problems users are facing, summarized in 1-2 sentences each:

1. Lack of engaging events and activities: Students feel that their college is not organizing enough events, activities, or extracurricular programs, leading to a sense of boredom and demotivation. This is evident from comparisons with other colleges that seem to offer more exciting experiences.

2. Overemphasis on academics and exams: Students are feeling overwhelmed by the frequency and timing of exams, and the constant pressure to perform academically, leaving them little time for other interests or activities. This is causing stress and anxiety among students.

3. Limited access to resources and support: Students are facing difficulties in accessing resources such as question banks, which were previously available but have now been discontinued. This is hindering their ability to prepare for exams and succeed academically.

4. Confusion about extracurricular opportunities and eligibility: Students are seeking guidance on how to join or create teams, participate in events, and understand the eligibility criteria for various activities. They are looking for clear information and support from seniors or college authorities.

5. Uncertainty about the value of internships and extracurricular activities: Students are unsure about the value of internships and extracurricular activities in terms of earning credits or points, such as AICTE points, and are seeking clarity on how these experiences will be recognized and rewarded. This is affecting their decisions about how to allocate their time and energy.
